Woodland and forestry agents

Dart and Gloyns Wood is an exceptional plot with the perfect mix of both meadow and woodland.

The pleasant valley setting in the heart of rural mid-Devon is hugely enhanced by the large stream hugging the banks of the northern end of the woodland. It would be hard to find a better place to create a camping area, perhaps with a wildlife watching hide and rope swing. This valley stream is a tributary of the River Exe and is spectacularly deep and surrounded by woodland in places. The combination of the valley and thick woodland around create an atmosphere which is quiet, secretive and secluded. The name Dart Wood comes from the Saxon meaning of 'oak tree river'.

To the south, the gently sloping meadow has fine views and would be ideal for family camping. A young fruit orchard was planted around six years ago and is progressing well, a deer fence has also been installed for protection. The meadow would be an ideal space for other smallholding uses or indeed a woodland fringe. A metered water supply is available.

The sessile oak woodland including some hazel coppice provides a good supply of firewood and scope for small scale forestry projects.

Many species of bird inhabit the woodland including long tailed tits, woodpeckers, buzzards, owls, cole tits and tree creepers. Bats inhabit some of the oak trees, roosting in holes or under any loose bark. Red deer are a spectacular site within the woodland, grazing on the bilberries in the summer months. The ground flora is varied but is dominated in areas by bilberries, also known as whortleberries. They are closely related to the blueberry, being slightly smaller in size but equally tasty!. If you love wildlife there is an amazing opportunity to learn about badgers as an official badger watching centre is located nearby.

The woodland is surrounded by beautiful wooded valleys. Nearby is Stoodleigh Beacon (over 980 ft.) which is the highest point between Exmoor and Dartmoor. It is said that a beacon was lit on this hill on the order of Edward II when he doubted the return landing of his Queen Isabel. The southern end of the meadow included with this woodland shares some of the fine views from this standpoint.

The name Gloyns originates from a local place name with Cornish links meaning barrow or lamb. This is relevant to the historic management of the top, southern edge of the woodland as this was previously grazed by sheep.

The village of Stoodleigh with a pub that offers quiz nights, live music and Sunday roasts is within walking distance and the popular town of Tiverton is just a short drive away. To the north, Exmoor national park and the coast are both within easy reach.
